

Sarah Crafton, MD

Gynecologic Oncology

Dr. Crafton specializes in the surgical treatment of tumors of the female reproductive system. Certified in robotic-assisted surgery, she is skilled with complex pelvic surgery for both benign and malignant conditions. She participates in all stages of cancer care, including chemotherapy and supportive services. She is currently site principal investigator of gynecologic oncology clinical trials.

After earning her degree at Northeast Ohio Medical University in Rootstown, Dr. Crafton completed her residency at Ohio State University in Columbus. She gained additional expertise during her gynecologic oncology fellowship at James Cancer Hospital and Solove Research Institute at Ohio State University.
